Organizations can face a wide range of risks that may jeopardize their ability to achieve their objectives. The consequences of inadequate or failed internal processes, people and systems or of external events should not be underestimated and can have a divesting effect on a business. It is a business necessity to put in place frameworks, processes, controls and provide training to manage risk by minimizing the occurrence and effects of events and threats faced by an organization. Ultimately effective risk management will:

We work with organizations of varying sizes, across all market sectors on the two main components commonly used to assess risk; impact and probability.
